

No three in a line again

Miriama is making a square window using smaller red or white square panes of glass. Her window has 9 panes altogether.

What is the smallest number of red panes that Miriama can put into the window, so that no three of them are in a line, and there is no way to put in another red pane without there three being in a line?

LEVEL 5